What does an Academic Repository represent?

The system that enables a huge number of valuable academic works (thesis, papers, conference items) and other materials (lectures, books, manuals, presentations) to be kept in digital form on a server and can be approached freely through internet is called Academic (Institutional) Repository.

What caused its appearance

- constant increase of the price of academic publications
 - universities stopped or drastically reduced subscriptions to a number of journals
 - reduction of the number of subscribers
 - narrowing of the visibility of the academic work
 - reduction of the possibility for the broader community to use the results of the research work

Initiatives

- 1990 Movement for Open Access to Academic Information was founded
- 2002 Association of Research Libraries (ARL) from North America introduces the concept of “institutional archive”
- The infrastructure for the new generation of research database has started to develop

Benefits

- What do Universities gain?
 - It improves the image of the University
 - The results of the academic research are permanently and effectively saved
 - The cooperation with the industry is being promoted which contributes to the development of the local community
 - It facilitates the process of giving reports, making statistics, participating in projects, following careers etc.
 - It reduces the cost of getting academic information

- What do researchers gain?

- Greater visibility of their academic accomplishments
- Establishment of a channel for dissemination of their research results
- Reduction of the cost for storage and dissemination
- Increased rate of the citation by a broader academic community

- What does the academic community gain?

- Wider global recognition
- Opportunity to increase the number of “consumers”
- New model of dissemination of information

- What do local communities gain?

- Quick and easy access to new scientific accomplishments in the fields of health protection, industry, economy, education, etc.

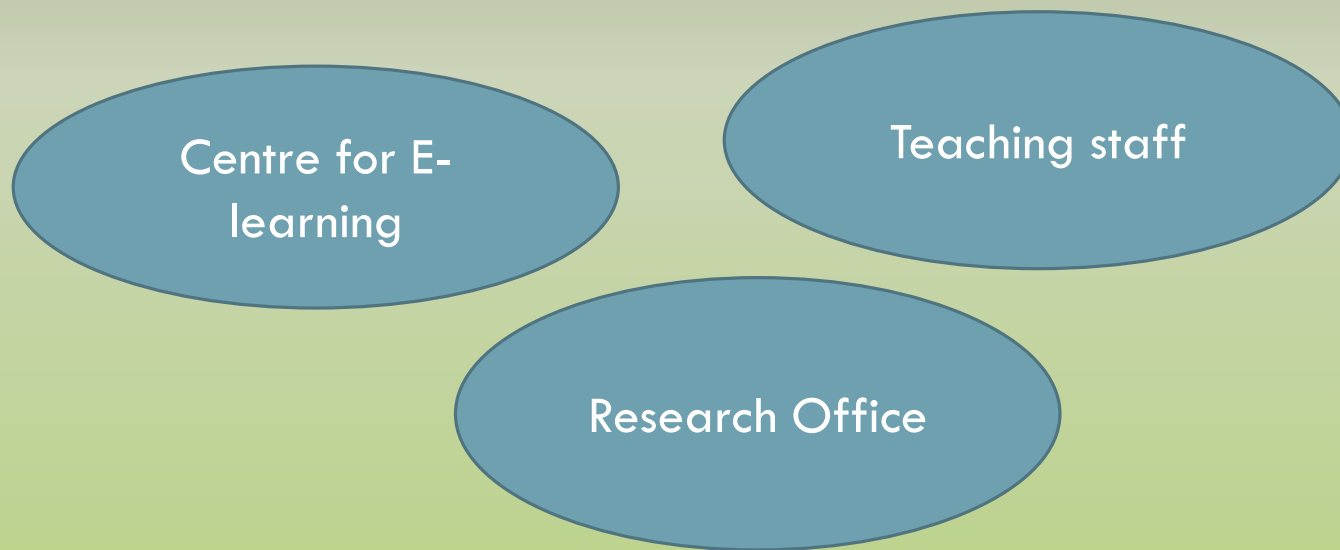

QUESTION

Noooooooooooo!!!!!!

Academic (Institutional) Repository, Goce Delcev University, Stip

- The UGD Academic Repository was introduced in October 2012

- Currently we are managing about 9500 research and teaching items of which 3600 were deposited retroactively dating back to 1972.

- It is easier to get data about the employees (mainly teaching staff) in the process of promotion in higher teaching titles, criteria fulfillment for FWH, participation/engagement in projects, as well as in other extracurricular activities, and other statistical data for internal or external requirements
 - The University is better positioned not only in domestic rankings but in international ones as well.
 - There is a dramatic jump in the citations of our personnel's published research work.
 - Such openness of the academic work is crucial to the establishment of cooperation with the wider community.
